disclose the names of the group's members, but said that it would contribute with 300,000 Swiss francs (SFr238,000). The group will also sign a joint statement with the political party FDP Alliance and lobby political parties for support. The group was created last month by some of the country's biggest employers, including UBS, Nestle NOESTE.UL, ABB [ABB.UL], Richemont RCH.S and Jabil JILB.N. "We as a group now in the context of the elections put our weight behind the programmatic statement," said Christoph Cumming, head of the group, which includes Jabil and Nestle, Switzerland's biggest carmaker. UBS Chief Executive Sergio Ermotti also took a dig at Switzerland's populist SVP party in a video posted on the bank's website on Wednesday, saying their slogan "Switzerland against the world" was "a little bit outdated". "The time is coming when all political parties will have to work together," he said. "In order to produce a really positive outcome for Switzerland, that will be a challenge for the political parties." UBS is to be cross-examined this week by the parliamentary financial commission on its dealings with ex-bank employee Hervé Falciani, who exposed in 2005 how the bank's arm helped clients move money and avoid tax.
