this way we can create views that way that our queries will select against. however, we are limited to toad data modeler 1.x and currently do not have this ability. instead, we will create a view that we can more easily extract data from. what is this amazing thing you call data modeling? i would contend that a better question is, what is it that you do? or perhaps more accurately, what do you think you do? data modeling is the act of analyzing, organizing, and documenting the schemas and data elements in an information system. while the goal of a data model is to provide a top-level view of all the data items in a database, it does not tell the rest of the dbas what to do with that information. at a very basic level, data modeling is about designing and defining things to be stored in a database. fortunately for you, you arent required to start from scratch if you have a good grasp of how things already work in your database. it may be that you have questions about a single table or element of a data model, or maybe youre just looking for a refresher in areas where youve worked with a particular database. i have worked in a variety of roles and technical roles for a variety of clients, and ive worked with a number of dbms technologies and applications. the q&a part of the self-assessment allows me to share with you the benefits of the self-assessment in an informal manner, so that you may apply what ive learned to your own situations. my client experience spans many different industries, so i have a great foundation to describe the applicability of the results of the q&as self-assessment to a variety of projects. i know that organizations are under pressure to enhance their skill set as cost of living rises. it is only my hope that ive learned these lessons from experience and can impart to others what ive learned while collaborating with organizations to develop their business strategy, improve data quality, and drive efficiencies through the use of toad data modeler.
